BONN, May 10 (WP) .- The value of the deutsche mark shot up approximately 4 percent today in the wake of the West German government's decision to let the mark follow a floating rate of parity with the dollar.

In an effort to combat the inflow of inflation-producing dollars, the government last night withdrew the Bundesbunk's commitment to support the dollar at an official exchange rate of between 3.63 and 3.69 marks to the dollar. Instead, for an indefinite period, the parity between the two currencies will be determined by freemarket supply-and-demand pressures.

Bonn Limits

As a result, trading today on West German foreign exchanges -the first since the exchanges were closed last Wednesday-saw the exchange value between the mark and the dollar follow an erratic course of ups and downs. At times, the dollar appeared to be slipping more than 5 percent to a new low. However, it regained some ground, and officials of the foreign exchange market finally set the dollar's rate for the day at 3.5250-about 4 percent below the suspended minimum parity of 3.63.

Guidance to Traders

Under the floating system, this daily rate is tantamount to an unofficial. nonbinding advisory estimate of what price the dollar appears to be selling at. It is important as guidance to traders and it also serves as the guideline for fixing the exchange rate on transactions made during the day but settled at a later date. Despite the generally confused state of the market. most banking sources seemed to be agreed that a large volume of foreign currency was still moving into Germany. They said this included not only dollars but also British pounds. French francs and, in BONN, May 10 (AP-DJ),-The West German government announced today that nonresidents will be temporarily barred from purchasing several domestic money market instruments.

The measure is part of a government ordinance that makes interest payments on nonresident deposits subject to special permission, the Economics Ministry said in making the announcement. Nonresidents' savings accounts below the amount of 50.000 marks, fixed deposits and deposits on notice are exempted from the need to obtain special permission for interest payments.

Among the money market instruments that nonresidents temporarily will not be allowed to purchase are deutsche mark treasury hills, non interest-bearing treasury bills, storage agency bills, commercial bills endorsed by German banks and made out

'Bankable Assurances'

Instead, the Commonwealth's Caribbean sugar problems will be reviewed with the Community's own sugar agreements in 1975. Commenting on this tonight, the British sources said: "The Caribbean sugar producers still need bankable assurances." Sugar production is planned ahead in eightyear cycles.

Some observers felt that the ball was now back in the British court, and that Mr. Rippon should repeat tomorrow officially what he has been suggesting privately for some time: that the British 3 percent figure wasn't final It is possible, however, that Mr. Rippon will insist the Six come up with their own counteroffer -in figures-which the French have not wanted to do.

The French plan was submitted to the ministers by French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing, and was given, according to the council chairman, Maurice Schumann, "Iavorable consideration."

Nevertheless, it is extremely vague, containing practically no figures,

The main figure given is the British GNP as a percentage of total community GNP, which. works out to 19.2 percent. continued inflow to expectations that floating, with its tendency said. to drive the mark upward, will eventually result in an outright revaluation of the mark.

In announcing the floating move last night, Chancellor Willy Brandt's government insisted that once the crisis of the dollar deluge is stemmed, it intends to return the mark to the suspended parity. However, this pledge is regarded with extreme skepticism in banking circles. There, the feeling is that the higher parity established by floating will be vurtually impossible to reverse when

The ordinance makes it clear that purchases by nonresidents of such money market instruments are banned only if they contain a re-purchasing clause for the seller at a fixed price. Foreign exchange experts explained that in practice, this means that West German banks cannot borrow abroad against money market instruments.

By Malcolm W. Browne RAJSHAHI, Pakistan, May 10 (NYT).-The crushing force of West Pakistan's military operaagathst the Bengali tion separatists has apparently destroyed all serious armed opposition in East Fakistan.

This city, which used to have a population of 100,000, stands on the east bank of the muddy, sluggish Ganges River, with India on the opposite shore 3,000 Jards away. Border towns like this were political strongholds of the now-banned separatist Awami League, which won a sweeping victory in the national legislative election Dec. 7.

The national army, made up mostly of Punjabls from West Pakistan, struck against the separatists throughout East Pakistan on March 25, and by mid-April, apparently, the army's campaign was virtually completed.

Business and trade in East Pakistan is largely in the hands of Binaris, who are a small minority among the local Ben-galis. The latter are mostly Moslems, but there is a substantial Hindu minority. Resentment on the part of many impoverished Bengalis toward the somewhat more prosperous Biharis was a factor in the Bengali separatist movement in the recent conflict. The impression, based on hundreds of interviews, is that when it seemed that the Awami League was about to come to power. Bengalis in some communities slaughtered the Biharis and looted and burned their homes.

Biharis' Revenge

The Bengalis in the national army revolted to join the separatists. When the predominantly Punjabi army of West Pakistan smashed its way into the eastern wing, it had ready allies among the Biharis, most whom were spoiling for revenge. The magnitude of the slaughter that followed has sickened most observers. As a result of the violence, most of the Bengalis and nearly all of the large Hindu minority in towns such as this one have fled. Here, the block of buildings making up the main market area of the city lies smashed, apparently by mortar fire from army units that took the town April 14.

Sen. Stennis did not say whether he had discussed his proposal with the administration or with military leaders. He is normally in such close contact with the Pentagon, however, that it is thought likely here that he has at least obtained assurances that the military would not vigorously oppose the measure.

New Calculations

Behind the tone and tempo of Mr. Nixon's activity lies a set of basic political calculations. The first is that while Mr. Nixon cannot lose points by ending the Indochina war and stabilizing the economy, he may not win points either, in part because the country is not likely to reward the achievement of objectives it has been conditioned to expect

'Cautious Optimism'

Now that Secretary of State Rogers has made his report to the President on his Mideast tour, there is a fair amount of public knowledge on the potential sticking points in negotiations for reopening the Suez Canal. What is still not known, however, are the possibilities of play and bargaining over these points. The best summary of the visits made by Mr. Rogers to Israel and Egypt is the old one: "cautious optimism."

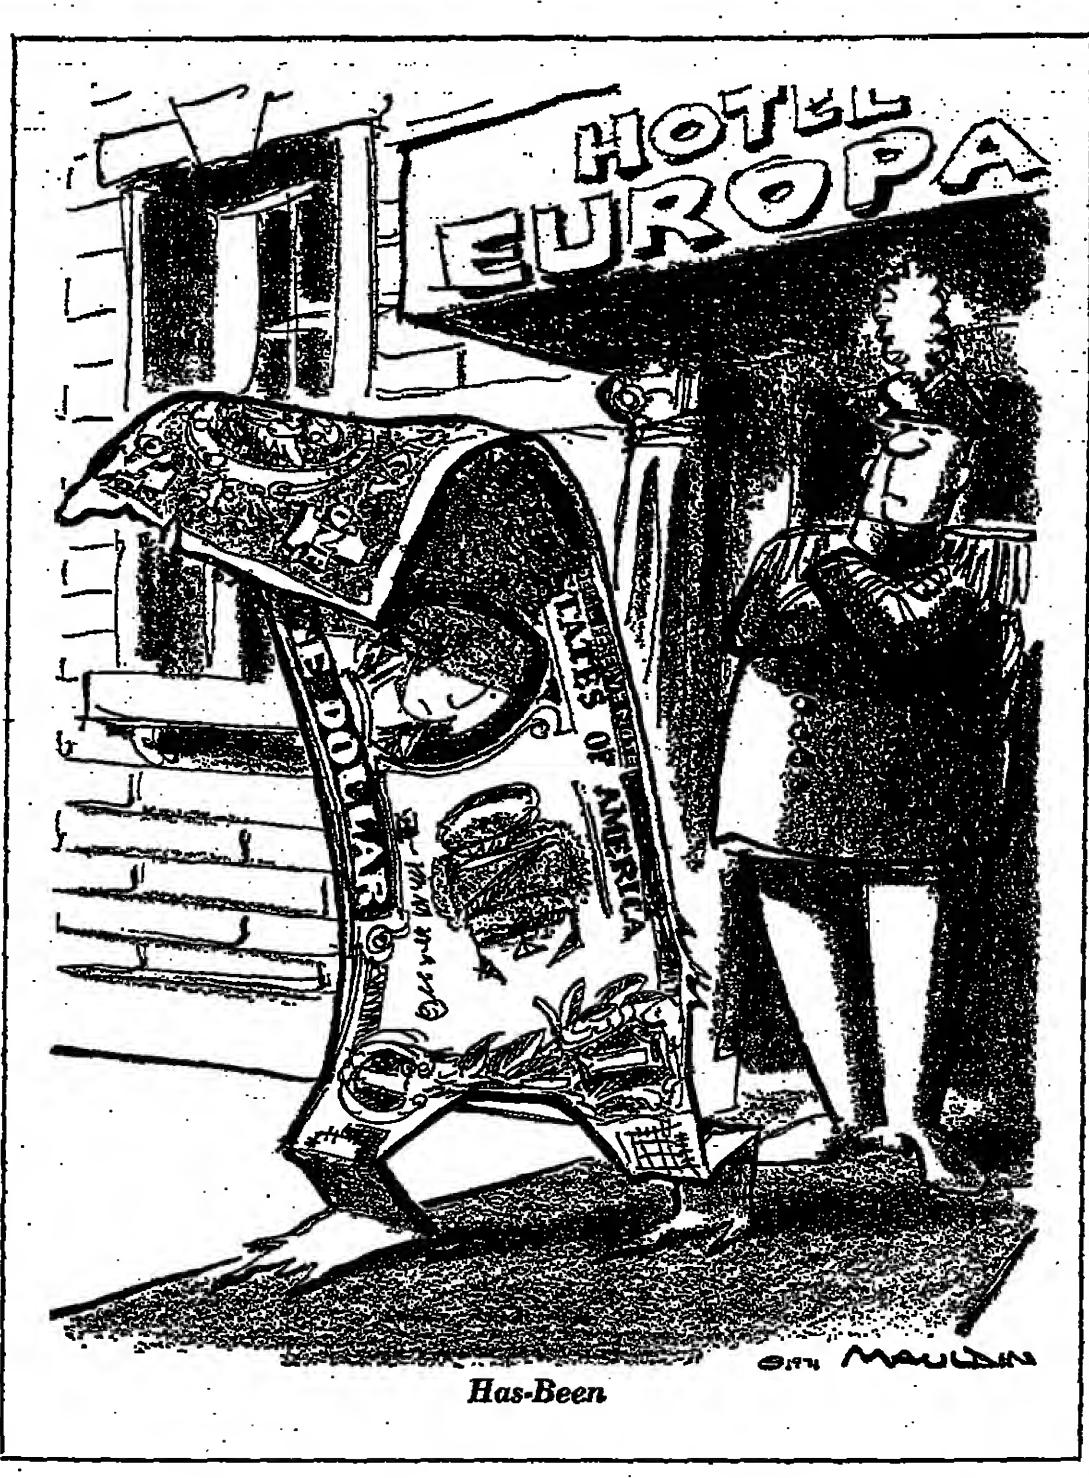

This, however, is a good deal more than might have been feared when the secretary of state set out on his journeying. And that there is any optimism at all can be credited to Mr. Rogers: If he did not reopen the canal, he at least bridged it, by giving both sides the clear impression that the United States wanted a peaceful, agreed, mutually acceptable settlement of this issue-and, by extension, of the war.

Personal diplomacy is a technique that is susceptible of abuse and conducive to illusions. Summit meetings tend to give the public larger-than-life reflections of decisions-like the shadows cast by an Alpine sunrise-either for good or ill. Yalta looked much more promising, the confrontation between Eisenhower and Khrushchev in Paris after the U-2 episode appeared much more threatening, than the cold facts of each warranted.

But when two sides are reduced to shouting across the Suez Canal, such an intervention as that of Mr. Rogers can be useful. It is evident that he made it clear he did not visit either Cairo or Jerusalem with some decisively enticing carrot or some devastating stick (although both sides knew he had a collection of carrots and sticks at home) but that he was more interested in convincing President Sadat and Prime Minister Meir that their own interests demanded some reasonable solution. And, if the solution itself is still remote, both seem willing at least to listen, and perhaps even to talk to one another, by deputy.

Given the tensions and old mistrust that permeate the Middle East, this was no small feat. Obviously, Mr. Rogers could not have done it if there had not been a substantial degree of receptivity on the part of his hosts. But to make this fruitful took tack and sensitivity. Mr. Rogers appears to be well endowed with both.

Russia and the Mideast Trouble on Tap

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON, - The hidden ironies of Secretary of State William Rogers's mission to the troubled Middle East can hardly be exaggerated. To begin with, the wisest handleappers give the secretary a rather better than even chance to "succeed"-in which case everyone in this country will burst into loud and happy cheers.

Success, in this instance, will mean securing an Israeli-Egyptian agreement, after further Middle Eastern bargaining, on what is known as the interim solution. The interim solution will involve some degree of military pulback the banks of the Suez from Canal, followed by reopening of the canal to traffic.

If this result is attained, it will offer the Israelis a long and rather reliable cease-fire on their most dangerous front, with the Egyptians. No one in his senses, after all, would waste a great deal of time and money on reopening the canal, without a strong desire to use the canal thereafter. And you cannot very well use a canal which is in the very midst of a war zone.

Right here, however, is the first and biggest irony lurking behind

Foreign Aid 'Shambles'

President Nixon's proposals for a radically revised foreign-aid program have provoked sharp initial criticism in Congress, some of it clearly warranted, some grossly unfair. Unless the administration and Congress can reconcile their differences and agree on the basic need for a substantial long-range international development effort, the nation's 24-year-old foreign-assistance program may indeed be reduced to the "shambles" Sen. Fulbright says it is.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman struck the first blow by releasing a five-year General Accounting Office compilation of faux pas in the aid program. There is nothing new about GAO horror stories concerning the misuse of overseas assistance. It is certainly proper for Congress to ferret out and try to correct such shortcomings. But these mistakes are not the totality of the ald program.

The current effort to assist in the development of nations deficient in the skills and resources needed for a modern industrial economy is far more difficult than the successful program of the fifties to aid in the reconstruction of Europe. Failures are inevitable in such a high-risk effort.

That does not mean the aid effort should be abandoned. On the contrary, the dangerously wide gap between the many poor nations and the few rich ones can be closed only if the United States and other developed nations try harder to build on the many substantial achievements of international assistance which critics too often ignore. The much-heralded "green revolution" for example, is no overnight miracle but the culmination of years of largely unsung assistance in many lands by this country and others.

funds "as a kind of diplomatic pork barrel -the granting of aid to purchase votes in the United Nations or to bolster a friendly government in crisis. This has led to the underwriting of projects that meet no sound development standards.

President Nixon has moved wisely to reduce the political component of American aid by channeling more funds through international organizations. He has also sought to make a clear distinction of purpose in the remaining bilateral program by separating purely development aid from "security" assistance. Other aspects of Mr. Nixon's new proposals, however, are less persuasive.

The President's plan to break up the existing Agency for International Development into three separate agencies, which has met a hostile reception in the House Foreign Affairs Committee, is not likely to improve the efficiency or effectiveness of the Amer-Ican aid effort. The plan does call for a coordinator of development assistance, but It is questionable whether he would be able to gain the degree of control over diffuse programs that the AID administrator has achieved after years of experiment and experience. The last thing the much-overhauled aid agency needs is another drastic. demoralizing shakeup.

What the foreign-aid program urgently requires is more generous funding to restore the United States lead in a faltering international development effort. Mr. Nixon's $3.34 billion aid request for fiscal 1972 is only marginally higher than last year's $3.14 billion overall appropriations. The almost certain result is that this year's final congressional appropriations will register a further retreat from this country's international responsibilities.

The Money Markets

The events of the past few days have fundamentally altered certain assumptions and balances within the [European] Community. In the first place, it seems inevitable that the Community will have to accustom itself to the notion of floating exchange rates. It still seems sensible that the Six should slowly change their basic attitudes on this question, so that while preserving the relation of their currencies to each other, they should become more flexible in relation to the dollar, which is the seat of the present crisis. In the second place, this change raises further questions in relation to the common agricultural policy. It seems increasingly as if a basically great measure of flexibility will, in due course, have to be built into this price support system in order to accommodate floating exchange rates. Finally, the Community as a whole will have to come to terms with the fact that the German mark is now a major international currency, like sterling. This is not the characteristic of any of the other Community cur-Tencies.

-From the Times (London).

France and Italy have resolutely refused to float their currencies. The Germans have therefore failed in their efforts to persuade their Market partners to float their currencies in unison, interlocked, against the outside world. Such a solution would have preserved the integrity of existing unifying Market policies—such as, notably, moves towards monetary union, which involve closer rates between the Six's currencies and the financial aspects of the agricultural plan. As it is, a period of uncertainty threatens the currency markets. In theory, there is much to be said for letting the mark, and indeed other currencies, find their own level. But it is difficult to see how the level of some Market currencies can be allowed to float while others remain pegged. The farm policy, which admittedly in itself is no great achievement in any case, would break down almost completely.

Brandt's Problems

Herr Brandt, the West German chancellor, is a man with a good deal to worry about. Two of the problems which touch most sensitively on the German mind-relations with the East and the bogy of inflation-are both causing trouble. So far as the Ostpolitik is concerned, the departure from executive office of the repulsive Communist warhorse Walter Ulbricht is unlikely, in the short run at least, to bring any easement of the extremely rigid attitude he has always taken over Berlin and relations with Bonn.

This attitude has in effect brought Herr Brandt's hopes of establishing a new and friendlier relationship between the two halves of Germany practically crashing to the ground, Herr Ulbricht's successor, Herr Honecker, is unlikely to drop it.

deeply concerned, would still U.S. to be fighting in Vietnam. in. effect ask him; How can you do And practical reasons-military fears about the effect on Army it?

Like the President he advises. Kissinger is evidently a fundamentalist on America's duty to resist Communism in the world. In Vietnam that hard-line instinct has had to be souared with his awareness of the military difficulties there and of the war's political cost at home. The contradictory themes can be sensed in the policy.

The Bombing Continues On the one hand. American ground troops are being steadily withdrawn-s trend that Kissinger would rightly tell his friends was a great change. On the other, the war has been widened in the last year, American bombing of all four Indochinese states goes on, with the effects on civilians that we now cannot avoid knowing, and President Nixon has refused to put any limit on American military involvement.

The objective is clear enough It is to win a political settlement even as the United States pulls out-by punishing the enemy until he gives up or makes basic political concessions to the existing Saigon government.

Kissinger has made no secret of his personal reasons for thinking we must carry on the war in that way. They are two. One is to maintain our credibility as a world power-not to look, as the President said. like a pitiful helpless giant. The other, with Weimar in mind, is to avoid a sense of defeat at home that could swing America disastrously to the right.

might indeed Those ends justify the attempt if there were any realistic hope of the other side giving up. But there is no such hope.

That is the burden of a brilliant analysis published recently by a former colleague of Kissinger, Prof. Stanley Hoffmann of Harvard. It appears in the spring issue of the new quarterly, Foreign Policy. Drawing on his lied countries of the West. It shows that the Europeans are beset by a paralyzing variety of contradictory impulses.

The administration in Washington, once again obsessed with Vietnam and the problem of mublic confidence, is seen to be out to lunch when other issues arise. Some of the glow may even be coming off the man who has hitherto been the local golden boy. Secretary of the Treasury John Connally.

The country most on the spot of course, has been West Germany. The obvious, sensible action for the Boan regime would have been a quick upward revaluation of the mark. That would have sent dollars flowing back to the United States and made it easier to deal with West Germany's internal inflation problem. It also would have shown Chancellor Willy Brandt leading the way toward cohesion in the West.

PARIS.—The evils of coupling finance and politics together are seen in the present monetary condition of the United States, where, in spite of its industrial activity and unbounded natural resources, the country is subject to elternate periods of stagnation, dullness and hard times-or great activity, violent changes of values and inordinate speculation. It seems that the finances of America are largely subject to the political necessities of the hour.

May 11, 1921 WASHINGTON .- President Harding has ordered the Department of Justice to begin an investigation into the charges of graft and profiteering on Army purchases during the war, and the sale of surplus supplies since the Armistice. Exceptin U.K. Decline Is Blamed On Monetary Crisis

> PARIS, May 10 (IHT) .-- Continued uncertainty about the international monetary situation and worries about the impact of the measures amounced over the weekend depressed most European stock prices today. . The notable exception was London, where the Financial Times index of 38 industrial shares rose 12.2 to 393.9, its highest point since April 1970. Fueling that advance were the incoroved prospects for British exports. The currency moves in Germany, Switzerland, the Netherlands and Austria will tend to make the price for U.K. goods more competitive there. Rank Organization, Unilever and Imperial Chemical led the advance, which in some cases was as much as 29 pence, Burmah Oil, in the vanguard of oil stocks, rose 12 pence (29 cents). South African gold mine issues fell and mining shares and dollar stocks were generally sluggish.

Central Bankers Doubt Crisis Is Resolved

By William Ellington

BASEL, May 10 (AP-DJ) .--Some central bankers meeting here expressed doubts today that the "dollar crisis" had been resolved by currency revaluations and floating rates. One banker hinted that additional exchange controls for the dollar may be Decessary.

A central bank governor, attending the regular monthly meeting at the Bank for International Settlements, said revaluation of the Swiss franc and Austrian schilling would do nothing to help the dollar. He said commercial relations between those countries and the United States were not large enough to have a real impact on the U.S. balance of payments.

He added that if West Germany, Belgium and Holland and "several other nations" revalued it would have a beneficial effect on the dollar. But he said it could not even be assumed that Germany, Holland and Belgium would allow their exchange rates to Central bankers blame the currency crisis on an oversupply of dollars, rather than on the fundamental strength of those countries that revalued or allowed their currencies to float. "If you look at the balance of payments of both Switzerland and Austria. you couldn't build a very good case for revaluation." one banker commented. Criticism particularly falls on the Eurodollar market, whose workings leave even central bankers somewhat puzzled. One informant said about $8 billion of the amount of central bank support given the dollar this year arose from the multiplier effect. This occurs when official dollar reserves are redeposited either directly or indirectly in the Eurodollar market, where they eventually are again turned over to central banks for national currencies. Lack of control over this

3d Victory of Year Nicklaus Final 66 Takes Nelson Golf

By Lincoln A. Werden

DALLAS, May 10 (NYT) ----"Why doesn't Jack Nicklaus win all the tournaments in which he plays," asked an impressed teenager near the 18th green of the Preston Trail Golf Club yesterday. The observer had just seen the big, blond golfer hole out for a closing 66 that won the Byron Nelson classic by two strokes with a 72-hole aggregate of 274.

followed with a run-scoring single, tving the game and sending Alley to third.

> The Dodgers then pulled off an unusual double play. Wills taking pinch-hitter Vic Davalillo's grounder and firing to catcher Duke Sims, who ran Alley back toward third, tagged him out and then made a diving tag of Clemente, who was attempting to go from first to third. Davalillo reached second on the rundown play and, following an intentional walk to Al Oliver, sped home with the go-ahead run as Manny Sanguillen beat out a dribbler to Wills. Jose Pagan singled home another run, Bill Mazeroski walked to load the bases and Sands cleared them with a double to center-for his first major league hit-before Clines capped the rally with his second double of the inning.

victory for the golfer who is considered one of the world's best. Nicklaus, 81, carned the first prize of $25,000 of the $125,000 purse and remained No. 1 on the year's money list with overall earnings of $131,775.

It was also his third victory this year on the Professional Golfers Association tour, one more than Arnold Palmer, Gary Player and Tom Shaw had posted. Two weeks ago Nicklaus won the Tournament of Champions after taking the PGA title at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., in February.

For a while yesterday, it seemed that neither Nicklaus nor any of his colleagues would triumph. Two thunderstorms caused two halts for almost two hours and the skies were continually dark. Nicklaus, however, hadn't begun his round either time that play was stopped. He was among those sheltered in the clubhouse and he nassed the time discussing fishing describing some of the fun he and his young sons have had with rod and reel.

Jerry McGee, 27, and a nonwinner on the circuit, put on a spectacular finish with a 65, one above the course record. He finished in a tie for second place with Frank Beard at 276. Beard, winner last Sunday at New ident Avery Brundage said Saturday that 50 skiers would be barred from the Winter Olyn;pics at Sapporo, Japan, in 1972 for having violated the amateur code. The move would strip Olympic skiing of most of the international elite. leaving unscathed only competitors from the United States. Japan and a few other countries. Brundage had announced he had a list of 50 skiers who, he said, had allowed themselves to be exploited by manufacturers for commercial purposes. He predicted "they will be all out." The general assembly of the NOC, convening under the chairmanship of Count Jean de Beaumont of France, did not make any reference to the recent statement of the IOC president.

But it said rule No. 26 should be on the agenda at the next session scheduled for September in Luxembourg, provided the IOC is agreeable.

The NOC general assembly expressed its regret that it was not consulted prior to adoption of rule No. 26.

In a unanimously adopted resolution, the Olympic committees recommended that the IOC make new provisions governing cooperation between the IOC and the national committees. It called for official recognition of the permanent general assembly of the NOC.

Buchanan Fights

LONDON. England. May 10 (UPD.-Lightweight champion Ken Buchanan of Scotland makes a rare appearance before home fans tomorrow night in a nontitle bout against Venezuelan Carlos Hernandez.

Buchanan, 25, has not boxed in Britain since defending his domestic title with a knockout victory against Brian Hudson here at the Empire Pool ring last May.

Since then, he has had three fights abroad, in Puerto Rico. where he won the title. New York and Los Angeles. The main bout on tomorrow's card at Wembley Stadium features Joe Bugner, who will defend his European title against West Germany's Jurgen Blin.

A successful defense of his title would move him closer to a fight against former world champ Muhammad Alf. which has tentstively been arranged for July 26 at the Astrodome in Houston.

MONTREAL, May 10 (AP) .---Austria's Adolf Ubleis continued to hold down the No. 1 spot as the world harness driving championship moved past the halfway mark at Bluebonnet Raceway last night.

Billy Haughton of the United States topped the field at the Montreal track with a victory. two seconds and a third, but his total of 263 points is still far off the 526 points Ubleis has accumulated.

Last year. Hervé Filion of Canada won the championship with 470 points. Before coming here, Ubleis won all three races at Roosevelt Raceway, won three races at Saratoga

Raceway Friday and two at Toronto's Greenwood Track Esturday. Last night, Urbleis, 33, came from last place with Officer's Attack for his lone victory.

New Zealand's Peter Wolfenden won the third race with Opeongo and France's Jean-René Gougeon scored his first victory of the series in the fourth race, driving Charcoal Lady to victory.

Washington Panic

WASHINGTON.-No one talks about it, but one of the greatest fears concerning the attempt of the anti-Vietnam demonstrators to close down Washington last week was that the American taxpayer might have discovered that only half the people here were really needed to run the government. I found this out when I rode downtown with my friend Phil

Jaylan on that Monday morning Buchwald when the protesters made their first attempt to keep government employees from getting to work.

Jaylan, who works in the Department of Bureaucratic Infinity, picked me up in his Volkswagen at 7 a.m. I never saw him so nertous.

"Don't worry, Jaylan," I said, "There's not going to be any violence."

"I'm not worried about the violence," Jaylan said, perspiring. "I'm worried about my job."

crazy kids manage to shut down the bridges and roads from Maryland and Virginia. This would prevent 70 percent of all government employees from getting to work." "That would be a catastrophe,"

I said.

"But suppose it wasn't a catastrophe. Suppose the government discovered it only needed 30 percent of its present work force.

"I never thought of that." "This demonstration is being covered by all the media," Jaylan said, "In the event that the protesters succeed in their shutdown and the government still operates smoothly, the whole country will know by tonight how few people it really needs to take care of the nation's business."

"We can't let it happen," I said to Jaylan as we skirted around a trash can on two wheels. "I have to beat Bradley to the office," he said. "Why Bradley?"

"He sits next to me. If he gets to work and I don't, they'll discover he can do my job as well as his. If I get there and Bradley doesn't. I can prove they don't need Bradley." "Gosh. Jaylan" I said. "that 'The last time Armenia enjoyed a significant

Wheeling and Dealing in Soviet Armenia

By Harry Trimborn

VEREVAN, Soviet Union.-Welcome to the land of the wheeler-dealer where shortchanging the customer is part of the way of life.

You will not find this description of the Armenian republic in any of the fancy travel folders of the Soviet travel agency. Intourist. But it describes one facet of the lives of the 2.5 million inhabitants of this rugged. mountainous land.

For the Armenians, along with the Georgians and Azerbaidianis in what is known as Transcaucasia, are obvious examples that the arts of the capitalist entrepreneur are not dead in the socialist Soviet Union.

They do not prey only on the foreign tourist; they gouge and cheat each other as part of the difficult chore of getting along and making-do in a have-not nation where the supply of consumer goods never seems to catch up with the demand.

"We steal from each other," said a young Armenian. "And we steal from everybody else. What can we do? We want to survive."

The comment could apply to other parts of the Soviet Union. But nowhere has the payoff, bribe and other forms of cheating reached the extent it has in Armenia and the rest of Transcaucasia.

A major factor in Armenia is that during much of the country's long, bloody history, the inhabitants have had to live by their wits. For most of the past 2,000 years Armenia has lived under the domination of one conqueror after another-Romans, Persians, Turks, Russians, The last time Armenia enjoyed a significant measure of independence was in the 14th century.

a fuss about it every once in a while. But as soon as the issue cools off it's back to business as usual.

A few examples of what the Armenians mean by "papakh":

A carpenter earning 100 rubies a month wants to boost his meager salary. So he steals some boards and nails from his job and uses them to board up-for a fee-a balcony for a neighbor. The enclosed balcony thus provides another room for the neighbor's cramped apartment.

Then there is the practice of rigging the apartment house electric meters so that they show only a fraction of the electricity used by the occupants. According to one Armenian who has his own meter rigged, the gimmick saves about 10 to 13 rubles a month. And if a meter reader uncovers a rigged meter, it can all be smoothed over with a few drinks of vodka and a pavoff.

The theft and cheating are usually pinned to consumer shortages that appear worse than they really are Take cigarettes. Popular brands are rarely displayed on counters in tobacco shops. And if you ask the clerk she'll probably say they aren't available.

Put down 40 kopeks on the counter and you'll get the brand you want, but no change, even though the government price is 30 kopeks a pack.

With Armenians being just as car crazy as the rest of the nation, one of the big sales events of the week is what could be called the floating used car market, a flourishing-and illegai-enterprise.

It's usually held on Sunday. There's no announcement about

The wind speed was only ten miles an hour but it was enough to send the crowd behind Paul McCarthy's garage skittering for cover now and again. One by one, the contestants stepped up to a line, aimed at a dime or a thimble or just let fly. each with his eve on the coveted first prize: a brass cuspidor and a year's supply of chewing tobacco. The occasion was the ."Ninth Annual Tobacco Chewin' and Spittin' Contest" at Paul's place in St. Louis. "It has to be all liquid," explained sponsor McCarthy. "You can't spit out just tobacco and you can't blow it out." The rules established, there was spitting for power and distance (both downwind and upwind), target accuracy (at dimes, thimbles and a fire in a potbellied stove), speed spitting (from pouch to target) and the dreaded-by the spectators-"spitting - overhead - and - backward-into-the-air trick." Winner for the fifth straight year was William Koster, 24, of High Ridge, Mo, who's been chewing since the age of four ("My parents never discouraged it.") And how did he feel about taking possession of yet another brass spittoon? "Well," said Bill,

"They won't fire you just because you're late one morning," I said.

"It isn't because I'm late., They may discover they don't need me." "I don't understand," I said.

"Look," said Jaylan, "for 30 years the government's been expanding at a ferocious rate. New departments have come into being overnight, old departments have been beefed up for no reason. The government is so big that no one has any idea how many people it really needs to make it work any more."

"Everyone knows that, Jaylan," I said. "But let's just suppose these sounds like dog eat dog." "It isn't just me. You see all those cars, humper to humper, out there? In every one of them is a Javlan trying to beat a Bradley to work. These people are willing to take nails in their tires, dents in their fenders, tear gas in their eyes, anything, as long as no one finds out they are expendable." A truck was stalled in the middle of the street and Jaylan and I lifted his Volkswagen over it and then we took off again.

"Bradley will never be able to do that," Jaylan cackled, "not with his station wagon."

By driving mostly on the sidewalk through Georgetown, Jaylan made it to his office on time, That evening on the way home he revealed to me that not one person in the bureau was absent. "As a matter of fact, there were several people on vacation and sick leave who came in to make "It sure was close." Jaylan Col. James O. M. Roberts, ex- sighed. "If it hadn't been for the brilliant work of the police and military, the government might 29,028-foot peak within two or have had to cut its payroll in half."

Since it became a Soviet Republic on Nov. 29, 1920, the Armenians have been enjoying a rising standard of living compared to the rest of the peoples of Asia Minor.

Still life is difficult and shortages remain. And while the Soviets like to boast of their "selfless" socialist economy, the Armenians know that the real economy-at least in their corner of the Soviet Union-is the system of "papakh"-literally "under the bat."

As a result. Armenians, like many others in the Soviet Union have plenty of money, but nothing to buy with it. This is evident to any visitor.

An American walking along one of the busy thoroughfares was accosted by three well-dressed Armenians offering to buy his $100 Japanese-made tape recorder for 300 rubles ($333, since 1 ruble arbitrarily equals $1.11).

The American refused. The offer was immediately raised to $444. The offer was still refused, because the American knew that such a transaction was illegal and could result in a long prison term.

But the prospect of being punished for an "economic crime" didn't seem to bother the three entrepreneurs. The reason is according to sources here, that the police look the other way during such transactions. It's too widespread to throw in jail everybody who commits such a violation.

There's talk that "papakh" has created millionaires among the Armenians. There's a story of the Armenian who has amassed so many one-ruble notes that he is willing to exchange 11 of them for a single 10-ruble note just to save space,

"Papakh" usually involves only a few kopeks at a timefive here, 10 there and 15 somewhere else. Still, it all adds up, and the government both in Armenia and in Moscow raises the sale, but word somehow gets around that anyone interested in buying a used car should go to a certain street.

There the prospective buyer will find anywhere from 20 to 100 cars lined up at the curb. like ordinary parked cars.

But the owners will be lounging nearby. When you spot a car you like, you ask the owner if it's for sale. When he cave yes, you begin haggling over the price.

But even without a car, transportation is no problem in Yerevan. The city taxi drivers, who are among the wealthiest of Yerevan's 800,000 citizens, always manage to find room for one more in their cabs. They'll charge the original passengers an inflated fare-the meters most likely are rigged-and pocket the fare of the extra customers.

The city's taxi drivers officially work 12-hour shifts with every other day off. But many will stay on the road considerably longer during their working days For the first 12 hours they work for the state taxi concern. For the remaining time, they work for themselves-just like any independent cabble in the West.

Cab driving is one of the most coveted jobs in Armenia. Reportedly cabbies make payoffs of as much as several thousand rubles to get such jobs and are required to kick back part of their daily take.

One of the payoffs goes to the "safety inspector" whose job is to check the vehicle for safety at the start of each shift. The check if carried out according to regulations, is timeconsuming thereby cutting into the time the cabbie could be out making money. To get around this, the cabbie pays off the inspector 50 or so kopeks and the safety check is completed with startling rapidity.

At 50 kopeks a crack for each cab, the inspector can make a bundle each day-only he's got to kick back some of it to others in the cab firm.
